FIRTH'S INDIAN PHOTOGRAPHS.

SEASON 1875-76.

MESSRS. THACKER, VINING & Co. desire to draw especial attention to the above Series of Photographs, which has now been completed by the addition of some 200 Views taken by an Artist, who passed the Season of 1874-75 in India for that special purpose.

The additions made include Views of the New Buildings in Bombay, a Series of Matheran Scenery, Views at Bassein, Poona, Nassick, and at all places of interest in this Presidency, as well as a large number of Views in Calcutta, Madras, &c., &c.

The entire Series now consists of over 500 Photographs, size 8 inches by 6½, the subjects being most artistically chosen and photographed, and exquisitely printed; they are certainly equal, if not superior, to any that have yet been produced, whilst they are sold at the remarkably cheap rate of Rs. 15 per Dozen.

All the new ones will be ready in the course of a few weeks, when complete lists will be issued, which will be sent upon application.

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE

SATURDAY EVENING, 23RD OCT. 1875.

YESTERDAY'S Liverpool Cotton Market closed steady, sales 12,000 bales, but to-day's report is dull, sales only 8,000 bales, prices unchanged.

The visible supply of Cotton for all Europe shows the following comparisons with previous years :—

	1875	1874	1873
Visible supply of all kinds	1,770,000	1,800,360	1,570,080
" " Surats	720,000	754,720	873,210
Price of Mid-Orleans	7 5/16d.	8¾d.	9½d.
" Fair Dholleras	4 13/16d.	5¼d.	6d.
Difference	2½d.	¾d.	3 3/8d.

The Stocks of Cotton in, and afloat for, the U. K. only, are as follows :—

	1875	Last week.	1874
Stock in Liverpool	580,000	610,000	621,040
" London	58,250	62,125	112,110
American Afloat	60,000	50,000	82,000
East Indian "	180,000	190,000	169,000
	878,250	912,125	984,150

These figures are worthy of more than ordinary attention this week, as on the corresponding date last year, the visible supply for the U. K. reached its lowest point. The comparison now shows a deficiency of 105,900 bales, to add to which there must be considerably less cotton in the hands of Spinners, and with that if we take into account that American is fully 1d. per lb. lower than it was last year the strength of the position is undeniable. Notwithstanding this, however, it is evident that the market is to be ruled mainly by the American Crop accounts. The low level of prices and the statistical position may tend to prevent any material decline, but so long as the Receipts at the ports continue to increase at the pace they are now doing, we must have extreme dulness at least.

The American figures for the week are as follows :—

	1875	1874	1873	1872
Weeks Receipts	147,000	132,000	104,000	114,000
" Exports to U.K.	26,000	35,000	21,000	21,000
" " Continent	16,000	11,000	3,000	28,000
Stocks at the Ports.	350,000	338,000	222,000	260,000
Total since 1st Sept.	573,000	563,000	376,000	528,000

In New York yesterday, Mid. Uplands on the spot was unchanged, but futures were 3/16 cents per lb. higher. Gold had declined from 116 to 115½ while Exchange on London had advanced from dlrs 4·77 to dlrs. 4·79 per £ sterling.

The Manchester Piece Goods Market yesterday was reported quiet but steady, prices being the same as on Tuesday last.

The General Produce Markets in London were without change of any kind. Consols this morning were quoted at 94¼. French Rentes 105, Bar Silver is still 57d. per doz.

A withdrawal of £40,000 from the Bank of England took place yesterday, destination unknown. The amount is of little importance unless it be taken as indicating that the advance in the Bank rate has not been sufficient to check the demand. On this point we are of course unable to form any reliable opinion on this side, but it is worthy of notice that the advance in Sterling Exchange in New York will probably stop any demand for Gold from that quarter.

Business here to-day has been almost at a standstill, and everything indicates the near approach of the holidays. Very little will be done next week after the departure of the mail, and we are not likely now to see much activity until the festivities in connection with the visit of the Prince of Wales are at an end.

IN STERLING EXCHANGE the transactions to-day have been unimportant, but the feeling has nevertheless been firmer for demand bills. We quote :—

Bank Bills on demand	1s. 9 27-32d.	per Rupee.
Do. 6 months' sight	1s. 10 11-32d.	"
Credits 2	1s. 10 9-32d.	"
Documents 3	1s. 10 11-32d.	"

For drafts on Calcutta and in Government Paper there is no change.

The SHARE MARKET has been extremely quiet, very few transactions have taken place and values generally show no alteration. Dhurrumsey Spinning shares have declined again Rs. 25 and. Fleming's Rs. 20 per share. Mofussil are Rs. 5 higher,

In COTTON we do not hear of any business of importance and prices are nominally unaltered.

FREIGHTS are depressed at a further decline. The Coomassie (s. s.) is reported to have been fixed for Liverpool at £1-12 6 which may now be called the current quotation. By sail there is nothing doing.

PIECE GOODS are very quiet and we cannot look for much of a business being done now until after the holidays.

We have received numerous complaints about the badness of the arrangements at Saturday's Levée, where the crush, heat and confusion were so great that an obeisance to Sir Philip Wodehouse approached to the dignity of a martyrdom for his sake. To make matters worse, a local contemporary announced that the Levee would take place half an hour before it actually did take place. A letter which we publish elsewhere is not a bit too severe upon the arrangements. The Prince's Levee will require to be better managed.

THE Durbhunga State Railway will be re-opened for goods and passenger traffic on the 1st of November.

THE Directors of the Bank of Bengal at their meeting on Thursday, made no alteration in the rate of interest or discount.

ABOUT thirteen Rajas and Chiefs will arrive in Bombay to-day, all of whom are entitled to a salute of guns varying in number from 21 to 9 guns, or a total of 139 guns, thus causing an explosion of a very unusual kind.

It is reported that the practicability or otherwise of the scheme for raising in India one or two militia regiments, composed entirely of Europeans and Eurasians, is engaging the attention of the Government of India.

THE Indian League, the new native association in Calcutta, has convened a public meeting for Saturday last for the purpose of taking steps to memorialise Government in favour of an elective constitution for the Calcutta Municipality.

THE total quantity of land under paddy cultivation in British Burma this year is 2,226,149 acres, being 17,873a cres less than that under similar cultivation last year. The area of land under other cultivation is 309,632 acres, being a decrease of 2,737 acres as compared with last year.

WE read that the Maharaja of Kapurthalla has just returned to his capital in a greatly improved state of health; and that it is confidently expected he may be able to undergo the fatigues and excitement of a visit to Lahore, to pay his respects to His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales in January.

THE Englishman regrets to announce the death, at Tikkari, of Maharaja Ramkissan Singh, the head of the Tikkari family in Gaya, who was only invested with the title about a year and a-half ago. He has left no male issue, but, we understand, that he has bequeathed his estate by will to his only daughter, who is unmarried. His loss will be deeply felt by all in the district.

HIS HIGHNESS the Maharaja of Mysore is expected to arrive at Bangalore about 6 P. M. to-morrow and will leave again for Bombay, by special train, on the following evening, accompanied by the Officiating Chief Commissioner and the guard of honour. A royal salute of 21 guns will be fired in honour of His Highness on the evening of the 26th instant, and again on the evening of the 27th.

THE Pioneer has heard that judgment was delivered Friday by the Deputy Commissioner of Simla in Colonel Colyear's will case. The essential feature of the judgment is that the attestation of the document which purported to constitute Major Goad executor to a will previously executed, has been declared invalid. A pro tempore receiver has been appointed to take charge of the estate. The judgment is said to have caused great public satisfaction.

A PROPOSAL has been made in Calcutta to commemorate the visit of the Prince of Wales to the City of Palaces by purchasing a grand organ and placing it in the Town Hall, Calcutta. The Ditchers cannot do better probably, but we would recommend them not to follow the example of Bombay, but to make some use of their organ when they get it. The Bombay organ, the handsome gift of Sir A. D. Sassoon, is rarely used now, and we hear that it cannot be used till it be put into proper repair, its present condition being due purely to the little use that is made of it.

Vanity Fair contains a clever skit upon Prince Leiningen, who was in charge of the Royal yacht Alberta when it ran down the Mistletoe. In a mock sensational story it shows how Prince Leiningen obtained admission on board the Serapis, and how he impressed the natives by gunning down the Flying Squadron and a number of Indian craft. In fact, such a tremendous sensacion did he cause by the visit of the Serapis to India that the natives acknowledged the invintible power of the Sahib, and Prince Leiningen's triumphal progress saved the Indian Empire. The story is rather forced, but we should fancy Prince Leiningen will be impressed with the moral of it.

EVERY one will remember how, during the siege of Paris, written messages were reduced by means of photography to such a small compass as to be capable of being inserted in a quill which was afterwards attached to a pigeon's tail. The same principle has been applied to military maps, which are reduced to one-tenth their size, in sections, on glass or pellicule. When placed in a black chamber, about as large as a stereoscope, they are amplified by a microscope. A lucifer match, or the end of a cigar, affords sufficient light to consult them, and a series of concentric circles mark the distances. An officer can thus carry the ordnance maps of all France in his pocket book. It is clear that this process might be applied to other purposes besides military ones. A traveller in the snowy range of the Himalayas would often find the advantage of having a map that could be stowed away in a pocket book.

THE fear we expressed, says the Pioneer, some days ago lest the appointment of Rao Sahib Narayen Bhai Dandekar to the Directorship of Public Instruction, Berar, would create a painful feeling among European servants of the Government with stronger claims to the vacancy, seems confirmed by local criticism. Two Europeans engaged in the educational work of Berar are mentioned as having been candidates—Mr R. E. Candy and Mr. F. A. H. Elliott. The first of these has actually officiated as Director for two years, and with all possible credit, while Mr. Elliott was performing the duties of the Directorship at the moment that Mr. Dandekar was appointed to supersede him. It is impossible to avoid the conviction that a mistake has been made.

THE Ball to be given to the Heir Apparent by the Society of the N. W. P. may now be fairly considered to have got into a stage. However, preliminary of real existence, H. R. H. has accepted the invitation of the Lieutenant Governor on behalf of his associates; and a strong committee has been formed in which, although the officials are very numerous, the Bar, the Railway Company, and the Developer interest are fully if not largely represented. The rate of subscription has, we understand, been paid at 2 G. M., that being estimated to be the lowest limit that would be at all likely to pay. In case of any balance remaining the wealthy are requested to show their loyal feelings by joining in a guarantee to make it good. All gentlemen having the entree to the Viceroy's levees are entitled to subscribe; but the less privileged classes of the community will not be forgotten; and will, in fact, have opportunities of testifying their loyalty which they never would have enjoyed in England. The Ball will take place in the Government College, Agra, on or about the 3rd February, and we (Pioneer) hope no pains will be spared to make it a complete success.

THE Pioneer gives the following account of the early career of Mr. Eastwick:—"Originally in the Bombay Army, his professional studies took him to Scinde, and he has given an interesting account of his sojourn there in the volume entitled "Dry Leaves from young Egypt." But the climate of India disagreeing with his health, he returned home, and became Professor of Hindoostanee at Haileybury College. The learned public are indebted to his knowledge of German and extraordinary industry for a translation of Bopp's Comparative Grammar, which, as everyone knows, is a standard work, and quite indispensable to the student of the Indo-European or Aryan languages. Subsequently to the abolition of Haileybury, he was employed in the diplomatic service in Persia, where his talents and acquirements would have been of more avail under a chief for whom he had greater respect than he unfortunately considered he could entertain for Mr. Alison. He has told his own story, and the public have had an opportunity of judging whether he was or was not unhandsomely treated. He has been in his time Private Secretary to Lord Salisbury; and the appointment not long ago bestowed on Major Burne was mentioned in connection with his name in London circles, where information is generally correct."

WE read in the Allahabad paper that a special train with the Prince of Wales' stud arrived at Allahabad from Saharanpore at half past six on Thursday evening and left on Friday evening at 5 o'clock for Bombay. Another special arrived on Friday at noon with the Viceroy's stud, and if original arrangements hold must be now following the first. A third special, with the Viceroy's body-guard, was to arrive on Saturday and go on to Bombay. General Browne, C.B., V.C., and Major Williams arrived on Friday and Captain Biddulph was expected on Saturday. The horses that arrived, some eighty in number, were a first-class lot, having been selected, many of them, by General Browne himself, and those who did not go to see them when picketed near the Rest Camp lost an opportunity of seeing a number of good cattle together. All classes were worthily represented—Walers, Country-breds, and Arabs. Among the former the splendid steeple-chase mare, Bella Donna (looking better even than she did when she carried her owner's colours so gallantly to victory in the Grand Military Steeple-chase at Umballa two years ago) was conspicuous. There were also some very nice weight-carriers among them and some very handsome teams. Among the Arabs—not an indifferent one among the lot—particularly noticeable was a very blood-looking chesnut with three white legs—the model of a pig-sticker for a moderate weight. Among the Stud-breds there were some very handsome pairs. The horses sent from the cavalry regiments evidently showed that officers had not been "weeding their ranks" when they sent them. One (from the 9th Lancers, we believe), a chesnut, was perhaps the gem of the lot. In short, if the other horses provided for the Royal party are as good as these, they will have little cause to complain of the way they are carried during their stay in India.

ARRIVL OAF H. M.S. DALHOUSIE.

HER MAJESTY DALHOUSIE, Captain H. W. Warner, arrived in harbour yesterday from Aden (September 15th, with six officers, 199 men, 16 women, 31 children, and 24 followers of 1-6 and 6 6 R. A. HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR'S LEVEE.

SIR PHILIP WODEHOUSE probably never held a Levée at which the attendance was larger than that of Saturday last at the New Secretariat. That circumstance is attributable more to the numerous visitors drawn to Bombay in the expectation of seeing the Prince of Wales than to any other cause. In the front compound a guard of honour, consisting of a company of the 21st Regiment N. I., under the command of Major Forteath, paraded with band and colours with His Excellency's body guard on their right. The Mayo and the University Roads were crowded by a large number of spectators. The visitors entered by the Mayo Road, and the carriages, after setting down the occupants, turned into the University Road and passed on to the sides of the two roads. At the approaches to the main entrance was stationed Mr. Smith, Superintendent of Police, who, under the authority of a paper he held in his hands—probably a list of the gentlemen who had the right of private entree to Government House and the Governor's Levées—strictly enforced that right on behalf of His Excellency, and directed the carriages, as they entered, to drive either to the main entrance on the right, or the smaller entrance on the left hand. In the ante-rooms attached to the Council Room, in which the Levée was held the presence of visitors was very great; and some time elapsed before ingress from one room into the other could be obtained. The presence of Parsees and Hindoos in long flowing snow white robes and of the commissioned and non-commissioned officers of the 1st Lancers, the Poona Horse, the 4th Rifles, and the 20th, 21st, and 26th Regiments, N. I. dressed in their uniforms of various colours, made the scene a truly picturesque one. The Aide-de-Camps to His Excellency—among whom was Jemadar Shaik Cassum—had had a very busy time of it in attending to their respective duties. The following gentlemen were presented at the Levée:—

SERIOUS ACCIDENT AT THE SASSOON DOCK.

ON Saturday afternoon, while experiments were being made with the large crane which Messrs Sassoon have erected alongside their dock, the ponderous machine gave way with a tremendous crash. It was broken to pieces—a more complete wreck of a machine could scarcely be imagined. The Sassoon Dock has been singularly unfortunate. At first, the proprietors were unjustly deprived of the privilege of unloading opium there; and now, they have to bear

GREAT BRITAIN AND CHINA.

(Times, Sept. 29.)

It would be useless to hide the gravity of the news from China. The report that our Government has determined to strengthen the Squadron in the Chinese waters is explained by the statement of our Shanghai Correspondent that the Government of Pekin will not effectually perform the engagements of the Tien-tsin Treaty. One cause of the disagreement is said to be the demand of our Minister, Mr. Wade, that the Yunnan officials shall be punished on account of the murder of Mr. Margary, and another is the refusal of the Chinese Government to publish its Treaties with us in the Pekin Gazette. We have yet to learn whether it has resolved to fight rather than yield. Li-Hung Chang may be only haggling in the political spirit of his race, and when he finds that we are in earnest he may discover one of those ready excuses for compliance which enrich the resources of Chinese diplomacy. There has at least, been no open rupture, for our Minister has not yet left the Court of Pekin. But he seems to have sent an ultimatum, and to have intimated that he would quit his post on the 13th of next month unless the Chinese Government should comply with his demands. Such an announcement is sufficiently grave.

In calling for the punishment of the Yunnan officials our Minister has doubtless appealed to the sixteenth article of the Tien-tsin Treaty, which promises that if any Chinese subject shall wrong Englishmen by a criminal act he shall be punished by the Chinese authorities according to the law of China. It is easy to forecast the reply of the Viceroy. He cannot have boldly refused to fulfil that pledge; Chinese Governors seldom frankly refuse to do anything. But he may have urged that the guilty persons must be found before they can be punished, and that he cannot lay his hands on the criminals. He may deny that the Yunnan officials had anything to do with the murder of our countryman; and Chinese diplomacy must have forgotten its craft if he has not used the maxims of our own jurisprudence to show that the innocence of the Yunnan officials must be assumed until their guilt shall be proved. If Mr. Wade has really insisted that they shall be punished, he must possess evidence which has not yet reached this country. It is no doubt emphatically said that they were at least consenting parties to the murder of Mr. Margary, if, indeed, they did not actually let loose the assassins on him; and the Mandarin class has instigated so many outrages against our countrymen that such a report is, unhappily, but too credible. Still, so far as we yet know, it is only a report, and, unless Mr. Wade has found specific proofs of their guilt, he is not likely to have insisted that they shall be punished without trial. It is the more necessary to be cautious in such a matter because, in dealing with the Chinese Government, we have sometimes taken shorter cuts to success than those sanctioned by Western codes of morality. We have occasionally seemed to assume that all Chinese officials are liars and knaves on whom it would be folly to waste the nicer refinements of courtesy and the moral law. Their Ministers are not above the labour of studying those Parliamentary debates which are often pitiless indictments of ourselves; and Commissioner Yeh is said to have been extremely gratified by the stern condemnation with which some of our chief statesmen and jurists visited the attempt to treat the Arrow as an English ship. If we must fight, let it be for reasons of clear justice and of pressing necessity. Happily, Mr. Wade has given us no cause to doubt his prudence or his power of self-restraint. He can, as our Correspondent in China shows to-day, maintain his own dignity, but he is not the kind of Minister who, when invested with authority in the distant East, is inclined to fight for trifles, or to be warlike because conceited Mandarins display the insolence of children. The probability is that he has made no unconditional demand for the punishment of the Yunnan officials, but only insisted that the Government shall chastise the guilty, and that he finds it evading this duty. There can be little doubt that it will shield the murderers if it can, and that its preparations to find them out have been little better than a series of pretexts. If Mr. Wade sees that the Viceroy is trifling with him, his duty is, of course, as manifest as it is momentous. At all hazards, we must insist that reparation shall be made for the murder of our countrymen, because if one such outrage should go unpunished, others of the same kind would inevitably follow. Firmness is as necessary in our dealings with the Chinese as courtesy and justice.

The demand that the Treaty rights of this country shall be published in the Pekin Gazette may be still more unwelcome to the Chinese Government than the call for the punishment of the Yunnan murderers. It was only after a disastrous war that the Emperor consented, in the eighth article of the Treaty of 1860, to command his high authorities to publish the compact for general information. To print the terms of it in the official Gazette was to proclaim throughout the Empire that "the barbarians" had been absolutely victorious. An end would thus have been put to much of the boasting which has hitherto been the essence of Chinese proclamations. It is said that the fulfilment of the pledge was evaded by the publication of the Treaty only in such copies of the Pekin Gazette as would reach the hands of Englishmen, and that it was omitted in those numbers intended for general circulation. At least, most of the Chinese people are absolutely ignorant of the privileges which we have exacted by war. The officials know, for example, that the ninth article of the Treaty of Tien-tsin gives our countrymen a right to travel for pleasure or business into all parts of the interior so long as they possess passports; but the great mass of the natives still regard such visitors as intruders, and this idea is fostered by the official and the literary class. The only way to make our rights clear is to have them properly advertised in the official journal, because that print is regarded with absolute trust. Nothing, moreover, would so tend to give the people a true idea of English power as the text of a Treaty in which China is revealed as a suppliant for peace. Mr. Wade, who has a profound knowledge of the Chinese character, does well to insist on the literal fulfilment of a pledge which was one of the most valuable parts of the Treaty.

Our Shanghai Correspondent speaks the mind of the English residents when he says, in another column, that "the only way to deal with Asiatics is to insist on the strict and literal observance of the conditions you have laid down, firmly resenting every effort at evasion." This maxim is sound, so long as it is enforced with scrupulous courtesy and justice. It is quite true that "honourable understandings" and the delicacies of diplomatic honour are incomprehensible in Pekin. They cannot live in the atmosphere of the East, and their place must be filled by a rougher kind of pressure. The property and the lives of English residents in China will cease to be respected the moment that this country ceases to be feared. As our Treaty rights were exacted by war, so it is only by the apprehension of war that they can be maintained. We may as well leave China altogether if we are not ready to maintain those rights by the weapons with which they were won. If, then, nothing but threats will induce the Chinese Government to bring the murderers of Mr. Margary to light and punish them, threats must be used. If threats should fail, war must follow. These general principles of action will be admitted by all who admit that we have any right to be in China, and there is no danger that they will be forgotten. But it is equally necessary that they should not be applied if the shadow of a doubt rests on the justice of our case, or until all the resources of diplomacy have been exhausted. Our countrymen in the East are not inclined to be so forbearing. Their English disdain for a lower civilization and a lower race than their own, their hatred of Chinese treachery, their impatience at anything which hurts trade, and their consciousness of superior strength make them too much inclined to cut short all negotiations by calls for the Fleet. Looking at the dispute from the impartiality of distance, we cannot share their impatience. It would be easy for us, of course, to batter down the ricketty forts which the Viceroy has recently been surveying, and to put to flight the wretchedly armed troops described by our Shanghai Correspondent. But, although triumph would be easy, the contest would be expensive. Nor can we dismiss another consideration. China is the most populous country in the world, and the strength of the Central Government is already overtaxed by the attempt to keep order among hundreds of millions of people. More than once the unwieldy Empire has seemed to be on the eve of going to pieces, and much of its weakness is the result of its wars with this country. After the contest which arose from the affair of the Arrow, the Government was so weak that it could not rule the distant Provinces, and so poor that it could not pay its officials. Another disastrous war might reduce it to the condition of those other Eastern States which fall a prey to military adventurers. Were we prepared to do for China what we have done for India, such a calamity might be the beginning of a higher civilization; but one Eastern Empire is enough to tax our strength. Anarchy would be such a calamity in China that we are bound to be as forbearing as we safely can. Nor need the hope of peace be dismissed. The presence of Admiral Ryder with four ships of war at Chefoo, and the knowledge that our Squadron is to be strengthened, will powerfully help Mr. Wade. The Chinese authorities may have been buying gunboats, importing Armstorng guns, and building new forts. They may think that they would not fare so badly in a contest with this country as they did before they possessed European arms; but they also know the power of Western States so well that, on see ing the futility of evasion, they may yield rather than fight. At least, we cannot yet resign that hope. Meanwhile, our duty is to ask for nothing but what is essentially just, and to temper firmness with courtesy.

An Historical Leg.—The Marquis of Anglesea's leg was for some years almost as famous as the chivalrous Marquis himself, so far superior was it to anything that had previously been produced for a similar purpose. This gallant officer had a leg shattered by a cannon-ball at the battle of Waterloo; he underwent two amputations, one on the battle-field by an army surgeon, the other by Mr. (afterwards Sir Everard) Home, after his return to England. Then Mr. Gray set to work. He took a cast in wax of the stump of the poor unfortunate leg, transferred the impression to tough and light desiccated willow, and inserted the introduced strings of catgut to represent that (so-called) tendon of Achilles which gives elasticity and propelling power. It is a great thing to say that the leg retained its proud position for nearly forty years, until the Marquis, as a venerable field-marshal, closed his career at the age of eighty-five—not the same leg, of course; for an artificial leg, like a boot, will wear out in course of time. As experience grew, and further observations were made, the original Anglesea leg gradually made way for a better. The Marquis looked so well on horseback that the admiring public could scarcely believe one of his legs to be artificial. The spring of catgut at the back of the heel extended the foot when straightened; a spring inserted in the instep lifted the toes from the ground when the leg bent in walking. Nevertheless, nature had not been sufficiently imitated in the first Anglesea leg; there was no lateral motion in the ankle-joint; the wearer could not walk on uneven ground without experiencing an unpleasant amount of jar and strain. Moreover, there was too much creak and rattle with the metal-work, and the wearer had to keep near at hand a small oil-can, wherewith to lubricate his joints. These inconveniences were got rid of one by one—a great improvement being the introduction of a ball-and-socket ankle-joint, and another being the substitution of india-rubber for metal in some of the parts.—All the Year Round.

THE QUEEN'S DIFFICULTIES.

(Spectator.)

When the Queen makes mistakes.—and she has made one or two in reference to the Solent accident, though the explanation which has been published this week has gone a good way towards effacing the remembrance of one of them,—we ought never to forget that the whole gravamen of the error is apt to consist in the fact that she has forgotten, what she so seldom forgets, how many things any of her subjects may do without any offence, which it is impossible for her to do without very serious offence. Take, for instance, the two errors committed or permitted by the Queen in relation to this Solent collision. The first was a letter to Prince Leiningen, in which Her Majesty expressed her satisfaction with all that had been done on the Royal yacht on the day of the collision; and the second was the letter of General Ponsonby to the Marquis of Exeter, in which the Queen's wish was expressed to the members of the Cowes Yacht Club that the yachts would, for the sake of safety, as much as possible avoid the habit of approaching the Royal yachts to gain a sight of the Queen. Now, the first mistake which was the most serious, since it seemed to convey an opinion of the Queen's own as to a matter which was under the consideration of a coroner's jury, was clearly a mistake solely because it was the Queen who made it. Mr. Heywood, the owner of the 'Mistletoe,' which was run down, had expressed at one time a conviction that the collision was purely accidental, and that no one was to be blamed for it; but on hearing the evidence of the officers of the Royal yacht, he changed his mind, and volunteered an opinion that it was unfriendly movement on their part which caused the fatal event. No one thought of blaming Mr. Heywood for giving public expression to this view. It was a most natural thing that he should be swayed towards the opinion that his yacht had not had a fair chance. It was probably equally natural that the Queen, feeling the utmost regard, both personal and official, for Prince Leiningen, and long accustomed to trust in the skill of Captain Welch, should have been more ready to believe that the fault could not have been on their side. And if the Queen's opinions were as little likely to weigh with juries as Mr. Heywood's, no one would have blamed her for expressing her confidence. But of course it is not so. A word, which is a word, and nothing more, in any ordinary subject's mouth, is an event, a power, in the Queen's mouth. True, it may not always be a power on the side she intends. English juries are apt to be vexed by anything which seems to them like an attempt to oversway them, and if the judge had brought in a verdict of manslaughter against Prince Leiningen and Captain Welch, it is most likely that it would have been due in great measure to the disposition to kick against the pricks which such tribunals feel. Still, in whichever direction the expression of the Queen's opinion was likely to disturb the even balance of justice, it was only because it was the Queen's opinion, and not the opinion of a private person, that it was in danger of disturbing the balance at all. And similarly, though General Ponsonby's letter to the Marquis of Exeter, as President of the Cowes Yacht Club, might perhaps have been resented as conceived in imperfect taste, even if its request had been conveyed by any private owner who had just had the misfortune to run down another yacht, and so cause the loss of three lives, yet almost all the irritation it created in England was due to the special dignity and authority of the source from which it proceeded. The letter, unguarded as it was by any reserve of judgment as to the cause of the collision with the 'Mistletoe,' and unaccompanied by any hint that the high speed of the Royal yachts might with advantage be abated in the crowded season in future, seemed to lay blame by implication on the victims of the recent catastrophe; and of course, a hasty private opinion, however one-sided, to that effect would have hardly produced any special result beyond a sharp retort; whereas such an opinion, understood to come from the Queen, could neither be ignored nor directly assailed. Doubtless the advisers who did not dissuade the Queen from permitting the sending of these letters made a very serious blunder. In the case of the letter to Prince Leiningen, it should have been pointed out to her that, as regards the matter at issue, the Queen's opinion was worth nothing more at all than that of any other landsman who happened to be within eyeshot of the collision. And as regarded the letter to the Marquis of Exeter, the least sagacious of counsellors might have suggested that the interpretation which we now know to be repudiated by the Queen would be certainly attached to the language used, unless care were taken expressly to bar it, and that the omission to make any reference to the dangerous speed of the Queen's yacht at such a season would also be misconstrued.

But while every thinking person must concur in this view of these errors of judgment, a great many will fail to see that these errors of judgment chiefly consist in this,—that the Queen's advisers have forgotten how much less liberty of comment on any controverted issue the Monarch can have than any of her own subjects. No doubt it is inevitable that it should be so. The command of a great weight of authority must impose extreme reticence in using it. You could not allow the "Woolwich Infant" to be dreaded from a room whence you might safely enough discharge a rifle. The Queen must either confine the use of her personal liberty within very narrow limits indeed, or she must resign her authority. Personages so high do more than they intend by giving an opinion on an ordinary transaction. Their words are with power, whether they will or no, and consequently their words must be few and cautious. This is the condition of Royal life in England. But then we ought all of us to recognise at once that it is a very hard and unnatural condition, and that an occasional error in observing it ought to be very leniently judged in the case of a Monarch who so seldom makes a mistake of the kind as the Queen. Very few of us can realise at all how very artificial must be the life in which it is necessary not merely to keep a watch on your lips, but even on occasion to refuse that personal support and encouragement to deserving servants which their services seem to claim. The Queen, of course, must take her own view of what she observes, and she must feel the same kind of bias, when cases of conflicting testimony arise, as any other person. But while any other person might freely express his view and let the public see his bias, the Queen ought to do nothing of the sort. In order to be Queen she must renounce in great measure the right to express individual opinions, and even to reward individual fidelity by public support.

It seems probable that no one can tell by mere force of imagination how difficult such a rôle is. A great part of all the happiness and spring of life arises from the free give-and-take of mutual support and encouragement. If you are debarred from that, and enveloped, even in relation to private concerns, in a mighty cloud of anonymity and irresponsibility which renders it impossible to say "I think so-and-so," or if not to say this, yet to act in public in accordance with the saying, you must sacrifice to a very great extent feelings and volitions which are part and parcel of the personal character,—you must deliberately deny yourself the pleasure of being yourself. In a constitutional country, this has, of course, become comparatively easy to the Monarch, as regards things properly political, but we are apt to forget how great a struggle it must be to extend this training, and no doubt in a large measure habitual self-restraint in matters of politics, to the same area of vexations of private life. It cannot be an easy thing, when you see a near relative freely accused of negligence from which loss of life has resulted, and you happen to have a very strong prepossession on that subject yourself, to keep your feelings as much in abeyance as if it were a question of a Reform Bill or of the system of Army Purchase; nay, to let the public dogmatise or draw what inferences it will, without even having the satisfaction of expressing your own belief as one of them, and indeed one who may at least know more of what happened than any of the critics, leader-writers, and jurymen on who expressions of opinion so much depend. An ordinary Englishman who did not "stand to his friends," as it is called, in such a case, would be thought ungenerous and cowardly. And though it is certainly the Queen's duty to remember that she never can wisely exercise the liberty in such matter which belongs as of right to one of her own subjects, yet we, on our parts, must not forget how unique and difficult the duty we thus impose upon her, especially in relation to the personal issues of social life, is. And no doubt we ought to remember the same thing in extenuation of the counsellors who, as we say, have foolishly permitted such letters as General Ponsonby's to the Marquis of Exeter. It is very convenient to assume that the Queen is responsible for nothing, and that when there is blame at all to be laid on any onejit must be laid on some of her advisers. But as a matter of fact, we must perfectly well know that it cannot be so easy, perhaps not always even possible, for advisers to neutralise the Queen's individuality altogether in such matters;—to restrain her from making evident her own bias. In the first place, of course, the views of so characteristically influence-exerting a mind as the Queen's are pretty sure to affect her advisers at least as much as the views of her advisers affect her, and sometimes perhaps even more. And in the next place there is a point at which it must be most difficult, if not impossible, to argue against the Queen's wishes, even if they seem somewhat rash and likely to risk her popularity. After you have interposed all the checks you can imagine to prevent any imprudent assertion of the Monarch's individual opinions, there will remain points at which it is, and always will be, impossible to prevent them from showing themselves clearly enough to the country over which she reigns.

On the whole, while we entirely agree with the view that both the recent letters about the accident in the Solent were ill-advised, and calculated to create the irritation which they have created, we do not think that England is half enough aware of the extraordinarily artificial character of the social arrangements which are intended to prevent such mistakes, or of the remarkable self-restraint and self-abnegation which make mistakes like these in the Queen's reign so exceedingly exceptional. It is the most natural thing in the world that the Queen should take the view which her near relative and other officers take of such matters as the recent collision in the Solent. But it is a very artificial arrangement indeed which leads us to expect,—and expect legitimately,—that her personal bias should not be revealed to the world. The wonder is, not that now and then such arrangements should fail, but that, through the wise self-restraint of the Queen and the sagacity of her advisers, it should be a very remarkable and exceptional, thing when they do fail.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE IS THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

The Public are CAUTIONED against the unfounded statement frequently made, "that the composition of CHLORODYNE is known to Chemists and the Medical Profession." The fact is, CHLORODYNE was discovered and invented by Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE (ex Army Medical Staff), and so named by him, and it has baffled all attempts at analysis by the first Chemists of the day. The method and secret of the preparation have never been published. It is obvious, therefore, that anything sold under the name, save Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE, is a spurious imitation.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. P. Wood stated that Dr COLLIS BROWNE was undoubtedly the Inventor of CHLORODYNE.
